The Rotary Foundation

Fourteen Rotarians attended last week's meeting, two of whom were guests from the Dansville club, Deanie Traphagen and Jim Burns. Deanie would present the program for this meeting.

The Miller House started us with a salad of melon varieties, which was appropriate for the weather we enjoyed. They continued on the light theme with a chicken salad on a bed of lettuce, sided by tomatoes and a German potato salad. A little too light for my taste, maybe, but the potato salad was nice. The dessert was a small lemon flavored pastry.

On the subject of happy dollars, Sharon Vogt had one for a thwarted fraud attempt by a resigned employee.

Bob Oswald paid a three dollar fine for his crossing of the Pennsylvania New York line with a controlled substance. He brought a case of it for the addicts of Birch Beer among the club members. There was another purpose for the trip. Bob's dad saved $15 for the cost of flowers they decorated graves with. It's a good thing Bob has this new very economical SUV, so that he can make the trip on $15 worth of gas!

Roy Robinson didn't have a confession, but he saluted the Kimmel family for their beautiful job of cleaning out weeds around the Historical Society and making the place look so nice!

Speaking of flowers, Art reported that the Interact club had finished their annual planting of flowers on Main Street.

Bud StGeorge reported that the sponsor part of the Golf Tournament was going well, but he employed us to work on getting more foursomes to play.

The Relay Walk For Life took place on Saturday, so Art circulated a sign up sheet.

Starting the program, Deanie Traphagen distributed a questionnaire from the 2003 World Peace and Understanding Day. The answers were already filled in so we didn't have to rack our brains, but it served as an impressive list of all the things the Foundation does.

It's basically the whole International aspect of Rotary. Thank you Deanie for reminding us of this important aspect of Rotary. We are $300 behind this year's commitment of donations to RI, which the board will discuss next meeting.
